Chinese Clothing / 中国衣服 zhōngguó yīfú

China being an ancient country and variety of culture has different traditional attires being used for thousands of years. The traditional Chinese formal attire for men is tunic suit and for women cheongsam or qipao. Men's formal Suit which is also called ZhongShan (zhōng shān 中山) suit or a Mao (Máo zé dōng 毛泽东) suit has Prussian collar and four pockets. Prussian collar stands for rigors of governing a country and four pockets indicates four traditional Chinese moral virtues namely propriety, justice, honesty and a sense of shame. Lot many visiting international dignitaries also use this attire for the formal meetings in China. President Mao (Máo zé dōng 毛泽东) was very fond of wearing this attire in public functions.

Chinese Cheongsam or Qipao (Qí páo 旗袍) represents oriental women's dress Cheongsam evolved from Manchu female's long gown that is Chang Pao (Cháng páo 长袍). Chang means long and pao means gown. The gown which is worn by Manchu ethnic group is known as Qí páo 旗袍, as the people so this ethnic group are also known as Qi 旗. With modernization and westernisation, western attire has also become an attraction for the Chinese people.
